Quail Census To Be Taken

According to R. M. Freeman, Director of the Game and Fish Commission, game wardens throughout the state will take part in a study of the quail population during September.

Although such surveys are conducted annually, this year's has attracted unusual attention because sportsmen are well aware of the poor nesting conditions quail experienced this summer and prospects for a good hunting season depend upon that nesting season.

Many reports indicating many adult birds still seen in pairs without broods of young have been received at the Commission office in Jackson, but it is hoped that the state-wide survey will evidence better average conditions and that our quail production will again be approximately 3,500,000.

Reports of conditions found by sportsmen and trainers running their dogs during the few weeks preceding hunting season will be appreciated.

Hancock Co-Op Is Paying Off For Dairymen at $18,000 Each Month

Tiny Hancock County, with half Jackson's County's land area and less than half of its population, has developed in the last few years into the dairymen's center of the Mississippi Gulf Coast. Residents of this county weekly consume more than 5,000 gallons of milk produced there, about 60 percent of the total production of 73 dairies in that county.

A large but undetermined amount of the county's milk production from its other 67 dairies is also consumed in this county.

The Chronicle-Star and Advertiser sent a reporter to Bay St. Louis, Hancock County seat, this week for a first hand report on the Farmer's Cooperative there, which has been largely responsible for the development of dairy farming in this county.

The movement to organize the cooperative, which began more than three years ago and which did not get underway until May of last year, has developed into a major enterprise, paying 73 dairymen $18,000 monthly and employing 14 people in the plant with a payroll of $2,500 monthly.

New dairies are signing up almost weekly and most of the 73 now belonging to the cooperative are increasing their herds and improving the bloodlines of their cattle. The $70,000 milk processing and bottling plant is running at less than half its 3,000 gallons a day capacity and the manager, H. B. Duckworth, expects milk production to jump from 1,200 to 1,800 gallons within this month.

How It Began

The cooperative movement began in Hancock County in February, 1943, when 35 men met with Mr. Duckworth, then a Federal Security Administration agent and C. C. Stone, county agricultural agent. Eleven of the men were made charter members to give a tight-knit group an opportunity to work out the details.

Many of the 73 dairymen began business literally without a dime, this unique situation resulting from the cooperation of the FSA, which financed their purchase of cattle, the local banks, which financed the building of their dairy barns, and the cooperative, which supplied them with coolers, milker, and feed on a credit basis.

Mr. Duckworth reported that one former Pascagoula shipyard worker went into the dairy business with nothing down and soon had cleared himself of debt and was earning money. A first class mechanic had totaled. A. G. Favre, publisher of the Sea Coast Echo, and a director of the cooperative, relates the story of a 17-year-old boy who went into business with $25 a few years ago and now has a herd of 50 cattle, money in the bank, and is one of the county's most progressive citizens.

Equipment Needs

The dairy barns, built mostly of rough lumber at a material cost of about $600, are divided into three sections and have concrete floors in accordance with health laws. Six can coolers can be purchased from the cooperative for about $350 each and the milk cans can also be purchased at the cooperative as well as milking machines, for the larger operators.

Mr. Duckworth stated that about 20 cows are necessary for a profitable business and reasonable returns for the owner. Properly managed, a dairy with that number of cows, will support a family and give returns on the investment.

Seven veterans of World War II are employed at the plant proper in Bay St. Louis, five of them in the on-the-job training status while they learn various phases of the business. The plant superintendent is 24-year-old B. W. Wilson, a graduate of Louisiana State University and a veteran of two and one-half years in the army where he was awarded a Purple Heart Medal for wounds received in action in the European theater.

Cooperative officials are specially elated that a number of veterans have entered the dairy business in their county through G. I. loans and that the increasing milk industry is keeping home boys on the farm and in the county.

"The cooperative is the salvation of Hancock County dairymen," Mr. Favre declares. "And I do not believe that we will ever need another WPA in this county even if conditions were to get as bad as they were in 1933."—The Chronicle-Star, Friday, August 23, 1946.

SCHOOL LUNCH PROGRAM

Jackson Miss., August 24 (Special)—The School Lunch Program in Mississippi is being administered by the State Department of Education this year in conformity to the National School Lunch Act passed by the 79th Congress and signed by President Truman on June 4. State Superintendent J. M. Tubb announces that Miss Eleanor Wilson has been designated as the State Supervisor of this program and that area supervisors will be selected and their names announced at an early date.

Agreement and application forms are being mailed to county and separate school district superintendents in order that the schools of the state, white and colored—may qualify for the Federal assistance at the rates of nine and seven cents per A-type meal with or without milk. Schools may adopt a B-type lunch at six cents or a C-type lunch at two cents if school facilities cannot be provided for the A-type lunches. No state money is required to match these funds since off-set money in the form of lunch prices paid by children and other funds provided by local sponsors care for this item.

Mr. Tubb urges county and separate school district superintendents to execute these agreement and application forms immediately and return them to Miss Wilson for approval in order that reimbursements may be made on time and in proper order.

DAIRY PLAN FOR COUNTY

THE impressive success of the Hancock County dairy cooperative, the record of which is reported elsewhere in this issue, points out an opportunity for Jackson county which we believe our business men, civic groups, political leaders and citizens at large would do well to explore to the fullest possibilities.

We believe that the dairy co-op principle used so successfully in Hancock County and elsewhere, if combined with the balance-agriculture-with-industry principle by which counties and districts undertake the actual building of commercial plants, could enable Jackson county to build up a public-owned dairy plant, and possibly a canning plant for fruits and vegetables, which would measurably raise the standard of living of our rural residents, stimulate commercial business for the merchants, return increased tax revenues into the public funds, and in general bring us a long way forward to a sound and prosperous economy.

Many of us are in the habit of using general terms like this to describe our vague hopes and good civic intentions, very few of which we are ever able to pursue with an actual, detailed, methodical program. But here, in the combination of two proven principles, the dairy co-op, and the BAWI method of financing, we see before us a practical program which we could begin to implement tomorrow if enough of our people come forward with sufficient initiative and determination to back it up.

Here we have a program which could produce a going concern and which could be returning money into the county treasury and rising income to our people in a year's time.

Do we want it? Are we game enough and determined enough to go after it? If the answer to these questions is yes, then we can have this program in Jackson County—and if the answer is yes, this newspaper will work with county leaders without faltering until the program is realized.

Under the BAWI state law, counties, beats and municipalities are authorized to float a public bond issue for the construction of a plant. The plant is rented by the community to the company which is to operate it. The company pays back to the community, over a 20 year period, the cost of the building plus a nominal rate of interest, after which title passes to the company. What this amounts to is the opportunity to purchase a new plant without the usual heavy cash outlay necessary for doing so. What the community gets in exchange is an industrial pay-roll for its people. It follows obviously that a well-selected industry paying good wages makes such a deal worth while, while a low-wage exploitative industry would make such a deal of doubtful value to the community.

In the case of a modern dairy plant for this county, to be run by a cooperative association of Jackson county dairymen, paying what profits were to be made to our own citizens rather than to absentee ownership, it would seem to us that the BAWI method of plant financing would reach its ultimate usefulness for the state of Mississippi. The cost of a dairy plant would run somewhere between forty and fifty thousand dollars. The beat or the county could build such a plant, and then turn it over to an independent cooperative of dairy farmers who would elect their own officers and hire their own management, and thus keep the plant "out of politics."

We believe this county could adequately support such a plant. It seems to us also that a cooperative canning plant would give farmers a sure and profitable outlet for perishable truck crops which could raise the levels of farming as surely as a dairy co-op could increase the value and productivity of dairy herds. We recall that some years ago there was a fashion in growing English peas until the bottom dropped out of that market and county farmers could hardly give them away. With a canning plant such treacherous aspects of the truck market fluctuation could be avoided. A can of peas will hold its value despite the ups and downs of the current market for fresh peas.

We do not believe that all the industrial and commercial intelligence exists beyond the borders of Mississippi, or that our people, though admittedly less experienced than some, so lack organizational shrewdness that they must depend on outside firms to run their industries and lead them, like children, out of the economic badlands. If we can build plants with public credit for out-of-state firms, we can build them for associations of our own people.

That is, if our people seek the opportunity. The answer to this rests with the people and the leaders of Jackson County.—
The Chronical Star, Friday, August 23, 1946.

PERSONALITY CLASHES, SHOULD NOT RISE ABOVE COMMUNITY GOOD

BAY St. Louis made the headlines in the New Orleans Item of August 28th., with an item headed in bold face type, "BAY ST. LOUIS C. OF C. RESIGNATIONS BIG TOPIC" and which was followed by the following comments.

"The first topic of conversation in Bay St. Louis today was the recent resignations and elections within the Chamber of Commerce." The Chamber's president, vice president and a board member resigned is what was described as a 'personality clash' with unnamed other members. Friction has been developing in the group for some time, said Leo G. Ford, the former Board member, in explaining why he as well as Al Voight, president and Lucien M. Gex had handed in resignations last week.

Their places as members, but not as officers were taken by Laurent Dickson, Bill Bass and Dan Russell following an election last night, according to Arthur Scaffie, acting president. Election of officers would come later, he said.

Meantime, some members, said privately that Ford and Gex had quit the group in sympathy with their president's resignation.

This type of publicity may make good reading, but it certainly does not help Bay St. Louis nor Hancock County.

The Chamber of Commerce is the one thing that will help to build Hancock County. It is not necessary for us to go into details as to the benefits that may be derived from a good active Chamber of Commerce, we have made this very clear on many occasions.

We must have a live active Chamber of Commerce, and individuals should be big enough not to allow personality clashes and personal feelings to rise above community good.

Veterans' News

Pay ceilings set by Congress for veterans training or studying under the GI Bill do not apply to disabled veterans, the Veterans Administration has announced.

Maximums of $200 for married veterans and $175 for single men were prescribed by Congress for veterans training on-the-job or studying under benefits of Public Law 346.

Disabled veterans, VA said are enrolled for training or study under Public Law 16, a separate act, and are not affected by the new legislation.

Patients in VA hospitals in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi will be entertained by one of the best professional billiard players in the world late in November.

Erwin Rudolph, a trick shot specialist, is making a tour of Southwestern, VA hospitals through the courtesy of the Billiard Association of America, VA announced.

Blind veterans who have the grit to try and who get proper aid can get fun and benefit from many sports heretofore believed impossible for sightless people, the Veterans Administration believes.

In Houston, Texas, VA, with the cooperation of a local bowling alley has inaugurated a class in bowling for blind veterans.

The fundamentals of bowling have been successfully taught to the blind in several cities, VA said. The Houston classes are being directed by R. L. Springfield, advisement officer for blind veterans.

Two more guidance centers to help veterans with their vocational and educational problems have been established in Texas, by the Veterans Administration.

The centers will be operated by Lamar College of Beaumont and North Texas State Teachers College in Denton.

VA guidance centers are now operating in all sections of the Southwest. Psychologists and vocational experts are available in all the centers to help veterans.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Q. Is it possible for me to complete a four year course in three years if I go to school during the summer as well as during the regular school year?

A. Under the accelerated program in some schools, it is possible to complete the four-year course in three years or less.

Q. In event a veteran is employed, can he meet all requirements for a degree by attending late afternoon and evening classes?

A. Some colleges and universities have served the needs of employed workers for many years by offering a complete program of instruction in the late afternoon and during the evening. With the exception of medicine, the requirements for a degree in any curriculum may be met while the student is employed full-time during the day. Since it takes proportionately longer to complete the college work on a part-time basis, approximately 60 percent of the veterans in the past two years have preferred to obtain subsistence benefits from Veterans Administration and attend college full-time.

Q. May I transfer from one college to another under the provisions of the Service-man's Readjustment Act or the Rehabilitation Act?

A. Yes. Under the regulations of the Veterans Administration, the veteran may change his school, but he must have the approval of Veterans Administration in advance.

Q. If I get out of service just before school opens and do not have time to make formal application and wait for official determination of my eligibility and entitlement before the beginning of the term, may I attend classes?

A. Yes. You may make application, formal or informal, directly to the approved school that you desire to attend. You should, however, make a formal application on form 1950 at the earliest possible time. This formal application may be submitted to Veterans Administration through the approved school.

The Southern Bell family is made up of a whole of a lot of folks. As far as we know, it's the largest group employed by any company in the nine Southeastern states.

Operators, engineers, accountants, maintenance, construction, business office and administrative personnel—there are 45,000 busy telephone people. But that's not all. The number quickly grows to an astonishingly large part of the South's population when you picture each telephone member in his own family circle and count about four noses to the family. You see, directly or indirectly, they're all interested in giving you the kind of telephone service you want night and day.

Telephone people are your friends and neighbors—the kind of folks you like to rub elbows with. You always know them by the voice with a smile.

New Orleans, July 26, 1946—For meritorious achievement while participating in twenty and forty aerial flights, respectively, Leo J. Praetorious, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. P.
Praetorius, Sr., of New Orleans, was presented the Air Medal and Gold Star in lieu of Second Air Medal at informal ceremonies in the office of Rear Admiral A. S. Merrill, USN, Commander, Gulf Sea Frontier.

The citation reads: "For meritorious achievement while participating in Twenty and Forty aerial flights in anti-submarine operations in the Atlantic."

"As a member of the crew of the United States Naval aircraft operating from an escort carrier, he performed his duties in an outstanding manner, although subjected frequently to the hazards of high seas, icing conditions and high winds. His skill and courage materially aided in the success of many flights and were substantial factors in the curtailment of enemy submarine activities."

"This outstanding performance of duty reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Naval Service."

two years and entitled to wear the

ORTTE THEATRE
SUNDAY—MONDAY
'SHE WROTE THE BOOK'

Universal Comedy With Joan Davis And Jack
Oakie

For the first time in her career, Joan Davis portrays a fictional character in "She Wrote the Book," Universal comedy which comes to the Ortte Theater on Sunday and Monday. Jack Oakie is Joan's co-star in the gay new picture.

The comedy queen has devoted many years to creating the impression that she is an ugly duckling, unwanted by men, but in this hilarious satire, Joan blossoms out in a glamor wardrobe, and in full glamor makeup. The effect is a startling surprise, and the old Joan "who ain't got nobody" on the radio, has many men at her feet in the film.
Plot of "She Wrote the Book" deals hilariously with a case of mistaken identity. Miss Davis, who portrays a mathematics instructor in a small college, becomes involved in a mad chain of circumstances when she innocently impersonates the author of a risqué novel. Stricken by amnesia after a taxi cab crash, the comedienne is said to be taken through some of the most outrageously comical scenes yet devised for cinema purposes.

Mischa Auer is on hand with Miss Davis and Oakie to provide fun and the three top comedians, who have not heretofore appeared to gether, form a winning combination.
Also in the cast are such favorites
as Kirby Grant, Jacqueline de Wit and Gloria Stuart.

Charles Lamont, who also piloted
"Frontier Girl," was the director.
Warren Wilson and Oscar Brodney collaborated on the original screenplay with Wilson also serving as producer.

"She Wrote the Book" was made under the executive producership of Joe Gershenson.

... "but Honey, GAS Won't Cost Much!"

Remember the fun you had figuring out a budget for your marriage? Pennies really count when there's furniture to buy, a house to rent and a family to plan for. But heating, cooking and refrigeration costs never spoiled anybody's marriage plans in a town with natural gas service. There is no other fuel with its economy... none other with its dependability. Natural gas service is the product of free private enterprise—a product that would not exist in this area today if it were not for the initiative and courage of such private businesses as United Gas Pipe Line Company and its associated producing and distributing companies. The United Companies have built a vast network of pipe lines, joining wellheads with markets... stimulating the flow of millions of dollars through royalties and taxes. United Gas operations benefit every family in Mississippi, Alabama and Florida, in one way or another.

Annual Tag Day For Library Held Last Saturday

The Bay St. Louis-Hancock County Library's annual Tag Day, held on Saturday yielded a greater amount for the young taggers who were on the streets the greater part of the day, but the library's Big Donors have not remembered the library. The library board is deeply appreciative of those who have so generously contributed but those who have not responded may not be cognizant of the fact that the library has nothing to draw from for the general operating of the library but what it makes itself—only the salaries are paid by the city and county and for this the library board and librarians are fully appreciative. The question for the general public to answer is "Do we want a library and if we do do we want the best?"

The general public has no conception of the use that is made of this library by the schools, the ex-service men, the young people and visitors. It would take far more space than is allowed to tell in detail how this library was built up and how little funds it has had to build with but now it can no longer be classed as a small library. It has become a vital part of the town and should be a matter of civic pride to the community. If the people of the rural section do not profit by it it is only because they do not take advantage of the privilege offered them. It is for their use as well as for the use of the people of the town. Every community and every school has the use of the library if they want it.

The plea of the library board and others interested is please send in your contribution large or small and help the library reach its goal set for this year and in this way make it possible for this institution to maintain the standard it has set. Serving for all is its policy.

BILLIONS FOR WAR...

WHY NOT A MILLION FOR HIS WORK

Mississippi Methodism is on the march! In September it is conducting a "Million for the Master" Program to raise one million dollars for the causes and institutions of the Master in Mississippi. Billions were invested in War — certainly a million for HIS important work is not too much. Every thinking citizen will want to help strengthen those forces in our state that keep alive the principles of the "Prince of Peace."

HELP MAKE IT A MILLION FOR THE MASTER THIS MONTH BECAUSE

1. CHRISTIAN EDUCATION
2. ORPHANED CHILDREN
3. AGED PREACHERS
4. OUR OWN YOUNG PEOPLE
5. NEGRO CHURCHES

all NEED YOUR HELP NOW

The causes and institutions, that will benefit from the "Million for the Master" Program are: Millsaps College, $350,000; Mississippi Methodist Orphanage Home, $250,000; Supernnates, $200,000; Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi and the North Mississippi Conference Camp near Oxford, $100,000; Negro Methodist Churches and Colleges, $100,000. Certainty of need and sufficiency of resources imply success of the "Million for the Master" Program under the guidance and blessing of God.

SOUTH MISSISSIPPI ORCHARDISTS SEE $10,000,000 TUNG INDUSTRY

Livestock Plays Big Part Toward Increasing Income

Deep South Mississippi is getting ready to harvest a $2,000,000 tung crop this fall from the growing industry in the out-over coastal plains.

There are some 9,500,000 tung nut trees, most of them in Pearl River county, but many of them have not yet reached the bearing stage. Many of the tung orchardists are predicting that it is "just a matter of years" until it will be a $10,000,000 industry.

The region best suited in the U. S. for tung orchards is a belt from 50 to 100 miles in width along the Gulf of Mexico including South Mississippi, South Alabama, North Florida, South Louisiana and an area in Georgia and East Texas.

Although the industry is still in the experimental stage, it is definitely tearing out of its swaddling clothes and putting on long pants.

Raise Cattle To Save Land. Some 75,000 acres or almost half the total acreage in the United States, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is in tung orchards stand where once stood great virgin pine forests.

Research will quickly show that the tung oil industry is not a get-rich-quick scheme, but it has added in bringing Pearl River county from near the bottom of the per capita wealth among the 82 counties to among the top counties.

With the thousands of acres of fenced orchards supplemented on many farms by a semi-permanent pasture, beef cattle and sheep are being grazed 12 months in the year without supplemental feeding in some instances. Many growers are producing choice beef steers and marketing them from six to 18 months of age on grazing crops alone. Some herds have not received any hay, silage or concentrate feed for three or four years, but cattle have been in marketable condition throughout the winter.

The livestock industry is one of the very interesting features about the tung oil industry. Experienced growers feel that cattle and sheep do much in their own way to enrich the orchards over which they graze, and at the same time add to profits with beef, wool and lambs, and by controlling undesirable weeds and grass in orchards, which would otherwise have to be controlled by more frequent cultivation.

Yield In Six Years. L. O. Crosby, Sr., a leading tung enthusiast, says that experiments show that an orchardist should begin to yield profits at the end of six years, "if he starts out right."

Mr. Crosby has perhaps more acreage devoted to tung trees than any other person in this country.

Mr. Crosby's interest in tung trees is deep-rooted. Nineteen years ago he and Lamont Rowland, another grower, and a "father" of the Pearl River county industry, planted the first commercial tung grove on some 50 acres.

"We expected tung trees to grow wild," said Mr. Crosby. "They grew wild in China and we thought they would in our part of the state. All we did then was to plow fire lines to keep the fires out."

"For the first ten years, the trees were not even protected from the cattle and cattle actually destroyed some of them. The trees bore few nuts. In 1937 we hired a horticulturist who advised us to get them down and start all over from scratch."

"We gave him the task of seeing if he could bring a successful orchard out. The grove then was stumped, brushed and fertilized with five pounds of fertilizer per tree. Cover crops were put in. After five years the yield reached better than a ton per acre. The sixth year, which was an 'off year,' production rose to one and one-half tons per acre and since then has not fallen short of two tons per acre. Last year the yield reached two and a half tons per acre."

Another thing, the tung belt has reason to believe that as a result of increased production a large paint factory for their area will some day be located. The growers, with facts and figures to back up their statements, quote the technical experts as saying there is no 100 percent substitute for tung oil. They contend it has a greater alkali and acid resistance, greater durability, better gloss and gloss retention. Tung oil, or Chinalwood oil, as it is commonly called in the trade, is one of the most important of the dry ing oils.

Tung Uses. Prior to the war with Japan, shipments of the oil from China ran as high as 175,000,000 pounds a year with values reputedly running to $20,000,000 a year. Just before the war, the United States was reportedly taking about 75 percent of the Chinese export.

One of the most valuable of all vegetable oils, tung oil is used in the manufacture of high grade paints, enamels, varnishes, wall board, linoleum, cement paint, plastics, drying salts, glycerin compounds, ink, flat coatings, lacquers, lining for cans. During the war it was used as a waterproof agent in coating military material such as shells, tank guns, rifle and machine gun shells, tents, outer cover for balloons, airplanes and automobiles.

It was also used extensively in paints applied to warships.

Although it is not a get-rich-quick proposition, it is aiding these Deep South Mississippi counties, along with their steady rising to climb economically at a marked pace. A brighter future appears ahead for this young industry.

The labor costs have increased approximately 100 percent since 1942, according to some growers.

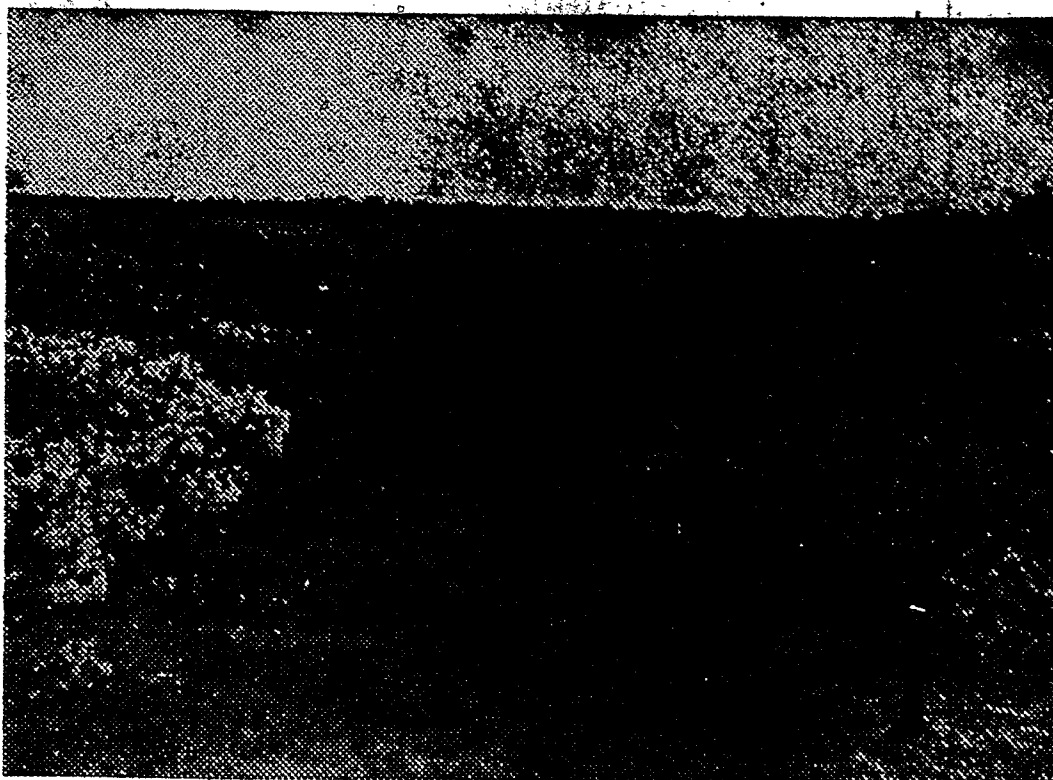

As a result, efforts are being made to find new labor saving devices for the orchardists.

Mr. Rowlands and others are working on machinery designed to harvest the nuts, and there is a possibility it will be on trial use this fall.

Growers Optimistic. Growers throughout the belt are optimistic about the future. They believe the United States government in the future will prevent the dumping of tung oil from China, but most of all they believe that with improved machinery and continued improvement and development being made in tung culture they will be able to compete with tung oil from China.

They will tell you quickly the industry is here to stay. It is now established on a permanent, profitable basis and progresses with each new season. They point out that there are now 12 crushing mills in the Gulf South region, and the industry is still in its infancy.

From blooming tung trees in South Mississippi, such as these, orchardists expect to harvest a $2,000,000 crop this fall.
